Goals

- Introduce Harvard College students to the library early in the first semester, when they are still receptive to new information.
- Make students feel welcome and at home in a space that is often seen as austere, opaque, and only for “serious” researchers.
- Serve as a program for undergraduates for the 75th Anniversary year, as events are already scheduled for Houghton’s other constituencies: staff, faculty, and library professionals.

Women, Gender, and Sexuality Studies

Women, Gender, and Sexuality Studies, alphabetically the last Harvard concentration, comes at the end of a guide through Houghton that hopes to have shown that the library’s reputation for being a place where diversity is the exception to the rule is unfounded. From African and African American Studies to East...

Visual and Environmental Studies

Visual and Environmental Studies encompasses a wide variety of artistic fields, from studio art to photography and film. Houghton’s versatile collection calls to all of these areas. The library owns over 12,000 books and...
